STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. BROWNBAC, Mr. HATCH, Mr. HELMS, Mr. EDWARDS, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. GRAHAM, and Mrs. CLINTON):

S. 2444. A bill to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to improve the administration and enforcement of the immigration laws, to enhance the security of the United States, and to establish the Office of Children's Services within the Department of Justice, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I'm honored to join Senator BROWNBAC and my other colleagues in introducing the Immigration Reform, Accountability, and Security Enhancement Act of 2002, which will strengthen our national security by bringing our immigration system into the 21st century. Recently, the Senate took an important step by unanimously passing legislation which strengthens the security of our borders, improves our ability to screen foreign nationals, and improves coordination among the several responsible entities. Restructuring the INS is the next critical step in establishing an agency that can act effectively and fairly to secure our borders and provide better services to immigrants.

There is strong bipartisan agreement that the INS must be reformed. But restructuring must be done correctly. The INS handles the enforcement of our immigration laws and the adjudication of benefits and services. INS's dual missions have long suffered under the current structure.

On the enforcement side, September 11 clearly demonstrated that our immigration laws are being applied inconsistently. Some of the terrorists were residing here legally, others had overstayed their visas, and the status of others is still unknown. Improving the structure of the INS will help ensure greater accountability and the consistent and effective enforcement of our immigration laws.

The INS service functions have also suffered. Courteous behavior has too often been the exception, rather than the rule. Application fees steadily increase, yet poor service and long delays have persisted. Massive backlogs have forced individuals to languish for years waiting for their naturalization and permanent resident applications to be processed. Files have been lost. Fingerprints have expired.

To address the distinct and at times conflicting responsibilities, successful reform must separate the enforcement functions from the service and adjudication functions. The result will be increased accountability and efficiency, as well as clarity of purpose.

But, meaningful reform must also include a strong central authority to coordinate these dual functions. Our legislation requires that one high-level person take charge of the Nation's immigration laws to ensure uniform policy determinations and implementation, accountability, coordination, and fiscal responsibility. The new agency's director, like the FBI director, will have direct access to high-level officials in the executive branch.

I congratulate the House of Representatives for acting quickly and decisively on restructuring legislation. The House bill abolishes the Immigration and Naturalization Service and establishes separate bureaus for services and enforcement which would operate as parallel structures with limited coordination. An Associate Attorney General would oversee the two bureaus. The goals of the House bill are very similar to our bill, and I look forward to working with my colleagues in the House and the administration to pass effective legislation and put these reforms into law.

The overarching difference between our two bills is the power and authority vested in the agency head and the coordination between the two bureaus. Our bill expands and improves the coordination between the bureaus through strong central leadership.

The Immigration Reform, Accountability, and Security Enhancement Act establishes a Director of Immigration Affairs, a Deputy Director heading the Bureau of Services and Adjudications, and a Deputy Director heading the Bureau of Enforcement and Border Affairs. The Director will serve as the principal advisor to the Attorney General in developing and implementing U.S. immigration law and policy. The Director will be the strong central authority over the two bureaus, and will be able to integrate information systems, policies, and administrative infrastructure.

The coordination and harmonization of policy, services and enforcement will also be enhanced by the establishment of several offices which will assist the two bureaus. The General Counsel, appointed by the Attorney General in consultation with the Agency Director, will serve as the chief legal officer for the Agency, providing specialized advice on all legal matters involving U.S. immigration laws. A Chief Financial Officer will direct, supervise, and coordinate all budgetary duties for the Agency. A Chief of Policy and Strategy will promote a national immigration policy, identify priorities and coordinate policy within the Agency. A Chief of Congressional, Intergovernmental, and Public Affairs will be the central liaison with Congress and other Federal agencies, and the media.

This bill will enhance the accountability of the new Agency and will renew our national commitment to civil rights in the immigration process. This bill establishes an autonomous Office of the Ombudsman to be located within the Department of Justice. The Ombudsman will be appointed by and report directly to the Attorney General. The Ombudsman will identify and report on serious or systematic problems encountered by the public and will assist individuals in resolving problems with the Agency. The Ombudsman also will report annually to Congress on the steps taken to correct the problems and propose changes in the practices of the Agency to correct such problems.

The vital role of statistical information in the modern age is recognized. This bill establishes a Director of Immigration Statistics, appointed by the Attorney General, who will report directly to the Bureau of Justice Statistics of the Department of Justice. Using 21st century technology, the newly established Office of Immigration Statistics will not only record and analyze statistical information, but will also establish standards of reliability and validation and will coordinate with the Service Bureau, the Enforcement Bureau, and the Executive Office for Immigration Review.

This legislation also recognizes the need for alternatives to the detention of asylum seekers. The U.S. asylum program is a bipartisan success story, it provides new hope and new life for the persecuted and oppressed and it advances our foreign policy objectives by protecting human rights and promoting the American dream of opportunity. The United States is a leader in providing asylum to refugees worldwide. Still, we constantly need to strive to improve this very important program. This bill would require the consideration of specific alternatives to detention, including parole with appearance assistance provided by private nonprofit voluntary agencies.

Finally, we are including much needed reform to address the treatment of unaccompanied minors in INS custody. I commend Senator FEINSTEIN's long-standing commitment to this important issue and am honored to include her legislation, the Unaccompanied Alien Child Protection Act, as part of our proposal to restructure the INS. These provisions will address many of the problems facing unaccompanied minors and will help bring U.S. treatment of unaccompanied alien children into line with international standards. The bill establishes a new Office of Children's Services within the Department of Justice to ensure that Federal authorities recognize the special needs and circumstances of unaccompanied alien children when making decisions regarding their custody and repatriation and ensures that unaccompanied alien children have access to appoint counsel and guardians ad litem.

This bill is needed to ensure that our nation is prepared to meet the challenges that are before us. The Immigration Reform, Accountability, and Security Enhancement Act will help remedy many of the problems that currently plague the Immigration and Naturalization Service and will ensure that INS's responsibilities are effectively addressed and coordinated, executed with efficiency and courtesy, and uphold our great tradition of immigration and refugee protection.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

“Sec. 236B. Alternatives to detention of asylum seekers.”

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, the attacks of September 11 exposed the weaknesses in how we protect our borders. Terrorists exploited the shortcomings in our immigration system and the lack of communication between the respective agencies that might have detected and deterred the events of that horrible day.

At the same time, however, September 11 has also brought out the best of this great Nation. As a people and as a government, we have united and stood firm in support of our freedom and our principles.

Significantly, September 11 has reaffirmed our Nation’s pride in its immigrant roots. We have not lapsed into xenophobia, nor have we let terrorism cloud our judgment about the value of our immigrant neighbors or our visitors. We can take great pride in the fact that the Border Security bill which this body passed just two weeks ago, was intelligent and balanced. We were true both to our responsibility to protect our great Nation from those that mean us harm and our responsibility to keep our country open to those who mean us well.

We need an agency that is likewise true to both these missions, an agency that can effectively enforce the immigration laws and provide timely and competent immigration services. Sadly, the Immigration and Naturalization Service has failed to perform either mission well, and restructuring INS has long been on the legislative agenda. While I deeply respect the hard work that Commissioner Ziglar has put into reforming that agency, the fact is that the INS requires more fixes than can be done administratively. The fundamental problems with the INS compel legislative intervention.

That is why I am honored to join Senator KENNEDY, Senator HATCH, and my other colleagues in introducing the Immigration Reform, Accountability, and Security Enhancement Act of 2002. I would like to point out that, as with the border security bill, we have a bipartisan, balanced, and intelligent bill that will deal effectively with the challenges that face our Nation. I am proud to be a part of it.

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 2445. A bill to establish a program to promote child literacy by making books available through early learning, child care, literacy, and nutrition programs, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, last year we reauthorized the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, one of the most far reaching education reform bills in decades. It was a significant bipartisan achievement, but it isn’t enough. We must do more to focus on the years leading up to school. Today, Senator KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON and I are reintroducing the Book Stamp Act and looking forward to working in a bipartisan manner to improve early learning opportunities for our youngest children.

In her statement before the Senate Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions Committee, First Lady Laura Bush called attention to the problems she saw as a teacher. She described children who were having difficulties learning to read because they had not developed the basic building blocks of language during their preschool years, the building blocks forged through reading, language play, and bedtime stories. In her words, "a failure to learn to read not only leads to failure in school, but portends failure throughout life."

It should come as no surprise that the foundation for learning and literacy is laid long before children arrive at our public schools. We can't ignore the facts. Each year, millions of children enter kindergarten unprepared for school. Before the first lessons are taught, they are already behind. Low-income children are particularly at risk of school failure. Children in low-income households are less likely than their peers to enter school with the language skills they need.

According to the Carnegie Foundation report, "Ready to Learn: a Mandate for the Nation," 35 percent of children enter kindergarten unprepared to learn and most lack the language skills that are the prerequisites of literacy acquisition. The research also shows that children who are placed in remedial reading groups early in school, often continue to perform below age expectation. Reading failure in school constitutes a major disability that contributes to school dropout, juvenile delinquency, teen pregnancy, and other societal problems.

In other words, the early childhood years are crucial ones for the development of literacy.

There is widespread consensus that reading aloud by parents is the single most important activity for building the knowledge required for eventual success in reading. There is a long history of research linking reading aloud by parents with verbal language and literacy skills with our children.

Regardless of culture or wealth, one of the most important factors in the development of literacy is access to books. Students from homes with an abundance of books and other language activities are substantially better readers than those with few or no reading materials.

Children living in poverty bear a disproportionate burden of early language delay as well as later reading disability. Children from families with lower incomes, as a group, receive comparatively little stimulation at home. As a group, children from low-income families grow up with fewer books in the home, and are exposed to relatively little reading aloud.

The Book Stamp Act will help remedy this. By providing books to the Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies, pediatricians, WIC clinics, and child care providers in each community, we can get developmentally appropriate books into the hands of low-income families. There are over 825 Resource and Referral Agencies that will provide free books to children enrolled in child care programs that serve low income families. Each child will receive at least one book every 6 months to take home.

However, we can't stop there. It is not enough to just give books to the children. Since young children cannot read to themselves, we must make sure that the adults in their lives understand the importance of reading to children as young as six months. Training the parents and the child's caregiver about the importance of reading is just as critical as getting books into homes. Funds set aside by the Book Stamp Act will also be used to provide such training for parents and caregivers.

Funds will be raised through the sale of a postage stamp similar to the Breast Cancer Stamp. Postal patrons may choose to support this program by purchasing premium stamps which feature as early learning character.

We know what works to combat illiteracy. Through the simple act of getting books into the homes of families who might not otherwise be able to afford them and by providing simple training for parents and caregivers about the best ways to read to children, we can make an enormous difference in a short amount of time. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 2445

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Book Stamp Act".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Literacy is fundamental to all learning.
 (2) Between 40 and 60 percent of the Nation's children do not read at grade level, particularly children in families or school districts that are challenged by significant financial or social instability.

(3) Increased investments in child literacy are needed to improve opportunities for children and the efficacy of the Nation's education investments.

(4) Increasing access to books in the home is an important means of improving child literacy, which can be accomplished nationally at modest cost.

(5) Effective channels for book distribution already exist through child care providers, hospitals, pediatrician's offices, entities carrying out faith-based programs, and entities carrying out early literacy programs.

“(2) affect regular first-class rates of postage or any other regular rates of postage.

S. 2443. A bill to ensure that death penalty defendants have a true opportunity to have their cases considered by the courts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to introduce legislation which is designed to have societal rights check law enforcement and to protect defendants' rights to fundamental fairness.

We are seeing an evolution of a number of problems in the criminal courts, especially applicable to capital cases involving the death penalty where I believe we are in danger of losing the death penalty in the United States if we do not act to see to it that there is fairness.

For example, there is one case specifically where the Supreme Court of the United States had four votes to grant certiorari where the defendant was under the death penalty, and that individual was executed without the Supreme Court hearing the case because there was not a fifth vote to stay the execution.

In the past several years, there has been growing evidence that DNA materials would have exonerated many individuals who have been in jail, and among those quite a number of individuals who have been under the death penalty.

And we have also seen very significant problems with the adequacy of defense counsel in capital cases.

The legislation I am introducing today will address these issues.

During my tenure as district attorney of Philadelphia—from 1966 to 1974—I became convinced that the death penalty is an effective deterrent. I had come to that conclusion earlier when I was an assistant district attorney for 4 years preceding my tenure as Philadelphia's district attorney.

I have seen many cases where individuals will decline to carry weapons on robberies or burglaries because of fear that a killing might occur, and that would be murder in the first degree under the felony murder rule and therefore carry the death penalty.

One case is illustrative of many I have seen. There was a case in the late 1950s in Philadelphia with three defendants, Cater, Rivers, and Williams. Those young men were 17, 18, and 19 years old, respectively. They had IQs of less than 100. They set out to rob a merchant in North Philadelphia, and Williams had a gun. Cater and Rivers said: We are not going to go along on this robbery if you take the gun. They took that position because they were apprehensive that a killing might result and they could face the death penalty under the felony murder rule. That is a rule which says anyone committing one of five enumerated felonies, including robbery, would be subject to murder in the first degree and the death penalty if there was a killing in the course of that robbery.

Williams put the gun in the drawer, slammed it shut, and, as the three of them walked out, unbeknownst to Cater and Rivers, Williams took the gun with him. They robbed the store. In the course of the melee, the merchant was killed. The three of them faced murder in the first degree charges and the death penalty.

In the course of the investigation, the confessions disclosed the essential facts which I have related, and all three got the death penalty. Williams, the gunman, was subsequently executed, in the early 1960s, one of the last people executed in Pennsylvania before "Furman v. Georgia" set aside all of the death penalty cases.

Cater's and Rivers's cases came up later. I was an assistant DA at the time and argued that case in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Later, when I was district attorney, Cater and Rivers argued for commutation. Representing the Commonwealth, I agreed that they should not face the death penalty but should face life imprisonment because they had tried to dissuade Williams from carrying the gun. Although in the eyes of the law their culpability was the same as a co-conspirator, it seemed to me that as a matter of fairness they ought not to have the death penalty.

That case is illustrative of many cases which have convinced me that the death penalty is a deterrent. But if we are to retain the deterrent, we have to be very careful how we use the death penalty.

When I was district attorney of Philadelphia, we had some 500 homicides a year. I would not permit any of my 160 assistants to ask for the death penalty without my personal review. We asked for the death penalty in a very limited number of cases—four, or five, or six a year—really heinous and outrageous cases where it was the conclusion that only the death penalty would suffice.

There has recently been a commission in Illinois which has been very critical of the application of the death penalty.

The Governor of Illinois has declared a moratorium on the death penalty. And with the growing number of DNA cases which are arising, it is my view, that unless some action is taken to see to it that there are not executions of people whose innocence might be established through DNA evidence, that we will soon lose the death penalty.

So it is a matter of protecting society's interest to maintain the death penalty that this legislation is being introduced, and, at the same time, with equal force, it is in order to provide fundamental fairness to defendants. Where DNA evidence is available, it ought to be examined. And we know it has the capacity, in many, many cases, to rule out the defendant.

The science of DNA has progressed to the point where tangible evidence may specifically exclude a defendant. We have seen many cases where incarcerated people, including those awaiting the death penalty, have been released when the DNA evidence has established their innocence.

There is legislation pending, but none reaches what I consider to be the fundamental question—I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for an additional 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SPECTER. The pending legislation does not reach the critical issue; and that is, to establish a right to DNA evidence as a constitutional right.

Congress, under section V of the 14th amendment, has the authority to legislate in furtherance of the due process clause. Congress has been very inert on establishing constitutional rights under our legislative authority under section V. We have seen the wave of Supreme Court decisions in the constitutional area—"Mapp v. Ohio," where the Supreme Court of the United States said it was a constitutional right not be subjected to unreasonable searches and seizures, incorporating the search and seizure provisions of the 4th amendment into the due process clause of the 14th amendment.

The Supreme Court, "Miranda v. Arizona," required warnings for those suspects who are in custodial interrogation. And there have been many cases where it has been up to the Court to establish the constitutional right.

In the obvious landmark case, perhaps the most important case in American constitutional history, "Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka," it was up to the Supreme Court to establish desegregation as a constitutional right. Action should have been taken long before by the Congress, long before by the executive branch, and long before by the State legislatures; but it was up to the Court to establish that constitutional right.

There has been one case in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, the "Godschalk" case, where Judge Weiner established a constitutional right for the defendant to see DNA evidence. And there is a Fourth Circuit opinion which addresses the issue but leaves it up to the Congress to act. And that is a matter that is taken up in this legislation.

On two other items, the bill will first provide for a true opportunity for defendants to have their cases considered by the courts. For example, there was a case where the Supreme Court of the United States had four justices willing to vote to grant certiorari and the defendant was executed because there was not a fifth justice voting for a stay of execution—and I ask unanimous consent that the case be included in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

ALEXZENE HAMILTON, AS NATURAL MOTHER AND NEXT FRIEND TO JAMES EDWARD SMITH V. TEXAS, No. 89-7838, SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, 498 U.S. 908; 111 S. Ct. 281; 112 L. Ed. 2d 236; OCTOBER 9, 1990

PRIOR HISTORY:

On petition for writ of certiorari to The Court of Criminal Appeals of Texas.

JUDGES:

Rehnquist, White, Marshall, Blackmun, Stevens, O'Connor, Scalia, Kennedy. Justice Marshall, with whom Justice Blackmun joins, concurring. Justice Stevens, with whom Justice Blackmun joins, concurring. Justice Souter took no part in the consideration or decision of this motion and this petition.

OPINION:

[*908] [236] [281] The motion of Chris Lonchar Kellogg for leave to intervene is denied. The petition for a writ of certiorari is denied.

CONCURRY:

MARSHALL; Stevens

CONCUR:

Justice Marshall, with whom Justice Blackmun joins, concurring.

I agree with Justice Stevens that the issue raised in this petition is important and merits resolution by this Court. I write to express my frustration with the Court's failure to avail itself of the ordinary procedural mechanisms that would have permitted us to resolve that issue in this case.

It is already a matter of public record that four Members of this Court voted to grant certiorari before petitioner was executed. [*909] See Hamilton v. Texas, 497 U.S. (1990) (Brennan, J., dissenting from denial of application for stay). According to established practice, this fact should have triggered a fifth vote to grant petitioner's application for a stay of [282] execution. * Indeed, this result flows naturally from the standard by which we evaluate stay applications, a central component of which is "whether four Justices are likely to vote to grant certiorari." Coleman v. Paccar, 424 U.S. 1301, 1302 (1976) (Rehnquist, J., in chambers) (emphasis added); see also Maggio v. Williams, 464 U.S. 46, 48 (1983) (per curiam) (same).

*See Autry v. Estelle, 464 U.S. 1, 2 (1983) (per curiam) ("Had applicant convinced four Members of the Court that certiorari would be granted on any of his claims, a stay would issue"); Darden v. Wainwright, 473 U.S. 928, 928-929 (1985) (Powell, J., concurring in granting of stay); Straight v. Wainwright, 476 U.S. 1132, 1333, n. 2 (1986) (Powell J., concurring in denial of stay, joined by Burger, C. J., Rehnquist, and O'Connor, JJ.) (noting that "the Court has ordinarily stayed executions when four Members have voted to grant certiorari"); id., at 1134-1135 (Brennan, J., dissenting from denial of stay, joined by Marshall and Blackmun, JJ.) ("When four vote to grant certiorari in a capital case, but there is not a fifth vote to stay the scheduled execution, one of the five Justices, who does not believe the case worthy of granting certiorari will nonetheless vote to stay; this is so that the 'Rule of Four' will not be rendered meaningless by an execution that occurs before the Court considers the case on the merits").

In my view, the Court's willingness in this case to dispense with the procedures that it ordinarily employs to preserve its jurisdiction only continues the distressing rollback of the legal safeguards traditionally afforded. Compare Boyd v. California, 494 U.S., (1990) (Marshall, J., dissenting) (criticizing diminution in standard used to assess unconstitutional jury instructions in capital cases); Barefoot v. Estelle, 463 U.S. 880, 912-914 (1983) (Marshall, J. dissenting) (criticizing Court's endorsement of summary appellate procedures in capital cases); Autry v. McKaskle, 465 U.S. 1085, 1085-1086 (1984) (Marshall, J., dissenting from denial of certiorari) [237] (criticizing expedited consideration of petitions for certiorari in capital cases).

Justice Stevens, with whom Justice Blackmun joins, concurring

This petition for a writ of certiorari raises important, recurring questions of law that should be decided by this Court. These questions concern the standards that the Due Process Clause of [*910] the Fourteenth Amendment mandates in a hearing to determine whether a death row inmate is competent to waive his constitutional right to challenge his conviction and sentence and whether he has made a knowing and intelligent waiver of this right.

James Edward Smith was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in Harris County, Texas, in 1984. Smith had a substantial history of mental illness, and his mental difficulties prompted a finding by the Texas trial court that he was not competent to re-resent himself on appeal. Pet. for Cert., Exh. 2, p. 13, Exhs. 4-8, 10-12. After his conviction, Smith vacillated between forceful insistence on prosecuting his own appeal and equally forceful insistence on abandoning any challenge to this conviction or his sentence. Pet. for Cert., Exh. 2, pp. 10-11, p. 2.

Petitioner is Smith's natural mother. Proceeding as Smith's "next friend," she attempted to establish her standing to litigate on her son's behalf and to have his execution stayed until his competence was established after a full adversarial hearing. She was unsuccessful. On May 23, 1990, without notice to petitioner, the Texas trial court held a non-adversarial hearing, made a finding that Smith was competent to make a decision regarding his execution, and set his execution for 12:01 A. M. on June 26, 1990. Pet. for Cert., Exh. 3.

[283] On June 22, over the dissent of Justice Teague, n1 the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals for Stay of Execution and Objections to Trial Court's Prior Proceedings." Ex Parte Hamilton. No. 18,380-02 (Tex. Crim. App., June 22, 1990) (en banc) (per curiam) (order denying application for stay). On June 24, petitioner filed in this Court her petition for a writ of certiorari and her application for a stay of [*911] Smith's execution. Four Members of the Court voted to grant certiorari, n2 and to stay the execution. Nevertheless, the stay application was denied, and Smith was executed on schedule.

n1 "Teague, J., notwithstanding that such might, but probably only will cause a slight delay in carrying out applicant's obvious desire to carry into effect his long held death wish, as well as his strong belief that he will be reincarnated after he is killed, but believing that this Court, at least implicitly, has ruled that in a case such as this one, where the reasonable probability that the defendant is not competent to request that he be put to a premature death, or, to put it another way, to commit legal suicide through the hands of others, has been raised, it is necessary for the trial court to conduct a 'full adversarial hearing' should now be conducted in this cause. See Ex parte Jordan, 758 S. W. 2d 250 (Tex. Cr. App. 1988). Also see Ford v. Wainwright, 477 U.S. 399, 106 S. Ct. 2595, 92 L. Ed. 2d 335 (1986)." Ex Parte Hamilton, No. 18, 380-02 (Tex. Crim. App., June 22, 1990) (Teague, J., dissenting from order denying application for stay).

n2 See Hamilton v. Texas, 497 U.S. (1990) (Brennan, J., dissenting from denial of application for stay).

[238] Smith's execution obviously mooted this case. The Court has therefore properly denied the petition for a writ of certiorari. This denial, however, does not evidence any lack of merit in the petition; n3 instead, the reason for the denial emphasizes the importance of confronting on the merits the substantial questions that were raised in this case.

n3 See Singleton v. Commissioner, 439 U.S. 940, 942 (1978) (opinion of Stevens, J., respecting denial of petition for writ of certiorari).

Mr. SPECTER. The legislation further addresses the issue of adequacy of counsel.

I will now describe the specific provisions of the bill I am offering today, and the cases and history that shows the manifest need for such legislation.

The bill contains three titles. The first Title will ensure that defendants facing the death penalty will not be executed while the Supreme Court considers their petitions for certiorari or their cases on the merits. The second Title will ensure that both federal and state defendants have a meaningful opportunity to present DNA evidence in their defense. Finally, the third Title will establish minimal standards for defense counsel representing defendants in death penalty cases in state court. I am additionally introducing these three Titles as three separate bills, as I will explain later. The first is "Title I: Right to Review of the Death Penalty While a Case is Pending Before the Supreme Court."

There have been death penalty cases where, despite the fact that the Supreme Court was either considering to grant certiorari or had actually granted certiorari and the case was pending, the Court did not issue a stay of execution in the interim. In the 1990 case of "Alexzene Hamilton v. Texas," 497 U.S. 1016, the Supreme Court failed to issue a stay of execution while considering a cert. petition, and the defendant was executed before the Court ruled on the petition. James Smith was convicted in 1984 of committing murder while perpetrating a robbery in 1983. He was sentenced to death. Smith appealed his conviction to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, citing seven points of errors, ranging from insufficiency of evidence to sustain a death sentence to challenges to the jury selection process in the trial. "Smith v. State," 744 S.W.2d 86, Tex. Crim. App. 1987. In 1987, that court affirmed his conviction and sentence. In April, 1988, Smith waived any further appellate review of his case. His mother, Alexzene Hamilton, then entered the case, and filed a state habeas corpus petition in the Court of Criminal Appeals, claiming that her son was incompetent. The state responded to the mother's petition, and the Texas court denied relief. Ms. Hamilton then brought a petition for certiorari in the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court granted a stay of execution pending disposition of the cert. petition. "Hamilton v. Texas," 485 U.S. 1042, 1988. The Court entered an order stating that the "stay of execution of sentence of death . . . is granted pending the disposition by [the] Court of petition for writ of certiorari. Should the petition for a writ of certiorari be denied, this stay terminates automatically. In the event the petition . . . is granted, this stay shall continue pending the issuance of the mandate of [the] Court." Id. On April 3, 1990, the cert. petition was denied. "Hamilton v. Texas," 496 U.S. 913, 1990. In May, 1990, the state trial court conducted a hearing and found that Smith still wanted to waive his appellate rights and that he was still competent. The trial court scheduled his execution for June 26, 1990. Ms. Hamilton again brought a writ of habeas corpus in the state courts on June 20, 1990, challenging the court's finding that Smith was competent. On June 22, 1990, the state courts denied this petition.

Ms. Hamilton then filed a habeas petition in federal district court on June 23, 1990, which the court denied on June 24th. However, Dr. Brown, one of the several doctors that had previously opined that Smith was competent, stated that he now had some doubts of Smith's competency due to his review of some medical records he had not previously seen. The federal district court found that this new opinion did not affect its findings, and denied Ms. Hamilton's request for reconsideration. On June 25th, the state trial court had Dr. Brown re-examine Smith, and Dr. Brown then returned to his original opinion that Smith was competent. On the same day, the trial court then denied Ms. Hamilton's habeas corpus petition. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals also dismissed Ms. Hamilton's motion for reconsideration on the same day. Additionally, on the same day, the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirmed the federal district court's dismissal of the habeas petition and denied her motion for a stay of execution. "Hamilton v. Collins," 905 F.2d 825, 5th Cir. 1990. Ms. Hamilton then filed petitions for certiorari, asking the Supreme Court to review both the state and federal court decisions and for a stay of execution. On June 26, 1990, the originally scheduled execution date, four Supreme Court Justices voted to grant certiorari, but for some unknown procedural reason, the Court did not formally act on the petition. The Court also did not vote to grant a stay of execution. Smith was subsequently executed before the Supreme Court decided on his cert. petition. The Supreme Court then denied Smith's petitions of certiorari. "Hamilton v. Collins," 498 U.S. 895, 1990; "Hamilton v. Texas," 498 U.S. 908, 1990. In denying the petition from the state court decision, the Court noted that it was dismissing the petition as "moot." 498 U.S. 908, Stevens, J., concurring in the dismissal of the petition.

In the 1992 case of "Herrera v. Collins," 502 U.S. 1085, the Court actually granted certiorari but failed to issue the stay. Herrera had been convicted of the 1981 murder of two police officers. Herrera then pursued two lines of appeals through the Texas state system—direct appeal and then collateral proceedings. Herrera then pursued two sequential federal habeas corpus proceedings. During these proceedings, certiorari had been denied three times, but on the second federal habeas proceeding, certiorari was granted. Herrera's claim was that he was actually innocent in this proceeding. After granting certiorari, the Supreme Court failed to grant a stay of execution. However, in that case, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals granted a stay while the case was pending before the Supreme Court. Herrera's claim was ultimately denied by the Supreme Court and he was executed.

The reason for this sequence is a procedural twist. By Supreme Court practice, it takes only four votes to grant certiorari. Although certiorari is recognized by statute as the procedure for getting a case before the Court, the statute does not state how many votes are needed. The four vote standard is the practice of the Court. However, to grant a stay, there must be a majority—five votes—and the standard the Court applies is different from that for granting certiorari. There may be good reasons why the standard is different, and in almost all other cases, the failure to grant a stay when certiorari has been granted or while the Court is still considering whether to grant certiorari does not have the dispositive effect that it does in a capital punishment case. However, in a capital case, the failure to grant a stay while the Court considers whether to even hear the case sends the signal that the Court is, in effect, affirming the decision of a lower court before it even decides that the lower court's decision is worthy of affirmation. In a case where the Court has actually granted certiorari and failed to issue a stay the Court, in effect, tells the world that a case is important enough to be heard, but not important enough to postpone an execution.

Until relatively recently, the Supreme Court had an "informal" practice where a fifth Justice would vote to grant a stay when four justices had voted to grant certiorari. The late Justice Brennan articulated the rationale for this rule:

A minority of the Justices has the power to grant a petition for certiorari over the objection of five Justices. The reason for this "antimajoritarianism" is evident: in the context of a preliminary 5-4 vote to deny, 5 give the 4 an opportunity to change at least one mind. Accordingly, when four vote to grant certiorari in a capital case, but there is not a fifth vote to stay the scheduled execution, one of the five Justices who does not believe the case worthy of granting certiorari will nonetheless vote to stay; this is so that the "Rule of Four" will not be rendered meaningless by an execution that occurs before the Court considers the case on the merits. "Straight v. Wainwright," 476 U.S. 1132, 1134-35, 1986, Brennan, J., dissenting. Justice Brennan's argument requires no further elaboration.

Justice Brennan's opinion involved a "hold" case, where he was arguing that a stay should have been granted. The "hold" is an informal practice whereby at least three Justices of the Supreme Court can "hold" the Court from acting on a petition for certiorari so that the Court does not deny the petition. A "hold" is placed on a case when the Court has another case pending before the Court, the disposition of which may have an affect on the first case.

In addition to Justice Brennan's argument, there are other reasons why a stay should be granted. In my experience as District Attorney in Philadelphia, and conducting oversight of the Justice Department while serving in the Senate, one theme is constant concerning our system of criminal justice: It rests on a bedrock that all Americans see the system as being fair to all. When the average American questions the fundamental fairness of any aspect of the criminal justice system, then it is in trouble. To the average American, when the Supreme Court has not yet decided whether it should consider a case or, has in fact, decided to consider a case by granting certiorari, but then fails to act to ensure that it can in actuality hear the case, that raises fundamental questions about fairness, regardless of the procedural nuances that legally allow for such a result. If we are to maintain confidence in our criminal justice system, then it has to be seen as fair to all.

When the Supreme Court takes action like this, in my judgment, it denies the defendant his constitutional right of "due process" of law which, in these circumstances, is colloquially referred to as "procedural due process." When the government takes action against an individual, the essential core of procedural due process is notice and an opportunity to be heard. In the instant case, we are not concerned with the notice aspect because the defendant knows why he was convicted. But when the Supreme Court has a case pending before it—that is a motion to stay execution or a petition for certiorari has been filed or the Court has issued a writ of certiorari—and then fails to grant a stay so that it can actually consider the petition or hear the case, it denies the defendant due process of law because the defendant is deprived of his right to be heard. A motion for a stay of execution should be treated as a petition for certiorari in these circumstances because, in effect, the motion is a preliminary petition for certiorari.

As I noted earlier, the writ of certiorari is codified in Title 28 of the U.S. Code. No defendant has a constitutional right to have his or her case heard by the Supreme Court. But once the defendant files a petition, then the defendant has a statutory right to have, at the very least, his petition considered by the court and, if the petition is granted, then the right to have his case considered by the Court. This is the method that Congress has created for the consideration of these cases, which does not allow a right of direct appeal. As Congress has created this two step procedural mechanism, Congress has the authority to ensure that it is effective. The Court does not have to grant a petition, but it must, at the very least, not allow a petition to become moot before it even makes this very basic decision. The same logic applies if the Court grants the petition.

The Court cannot consider the petition or the case if the defendant is executed before the Court acts. When a defendant is executed in these circumstances, he is being denied his right to be heard on his petition or his case and is therefore denied his basic right to "procedural due process."

The legislation I propose addresses this issue both at the federal and state level. With respect to federal cases, my proposed bill would prohibit the Bureau of Prisons or the military from executing a death row inmate when a defendant has filed a petition for certiorari and when the Supreme Court has granted certiorari. Congress created the federal death penalty, and Congress can establish the conditions when it can or cannot be carried out. With respect to state cases, my bill would address this issue in two different ways.

First, just as with federal cases, my bill would prohibit the executive officer of a state from executing a defendant when a cert. petition is pending or has been granted. Congress's authority to legislate in this arena is derived from Section V of the 14th Amendment which reads that "[t]he Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article." Section 1 of that Amendment reads in pertinent part that no "State [shall] deprive any person of life . . . without due process of law. . . ." As noted above, when a person is executed before the Supreme Court has granted or denied certiorari or acted on a case once cert. is granted, that person is deprived of his or her life without due process of law. My bill would also require the Court to treat a motion for a stay of execution as a petition for certiorari.

Furthermore, this bill would also require all federal judges, to include Supreme Court justices, to issue a stay whenever a habeas corpus case is pending before the judge or judges and the habeas petitioner defendant has been sentenced to death. A case is considered to be pending if a defendant has filed a notice of appeal, filed a motion for a stay of execution, filed a petition for certiorari, or when certiorari has been granted. Most death penalty cases, both federal and state cases, have their final hearings through federal habeas corpus review. Congress has broad authority in the area of habeas corpus legislation. Indeed, Congress enacted a similar provision as part of the Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996. 28 U.S. Code Section 2262 requires a federal court to issue a stay of execution in those circumstances where a defense counsel has been appointed to an indigent defendant and a state is seeking to fall within the streamlined habeas corpus procedures contained in the Act.

Additionally, my bill would require a lower court to issue a stay if a higher court did not in these circumstances.

Finally, my bill would require that if four Justices vote to grant certiorari in a death penalty case, then certiorari will be granted. When a person petitions the Supreme Court to hear his or her case, that person expects to have the case heard if four Justices believe it should be heard. This is the expectation of all those seeking Supreme Court review, an expectation resulting from the practices of the Court. The Court already has great discretion not to hear almost all cases it does not wish to consider. Congress has given the Court this discretion by eliminating almost all avenues of appeal by right to the Court and instead giving the Court the power to pick the cases it wants to hear through the certiorari process. Accordingly, Congress should have the power to require the Court to review those cases where four Justices vote to hear the case. The procedures for obtaining access to our courts should be as transparent as possible, and it simply defies logic and makes a mockery of the phrase "equal justice" when four votes in one set of circumstances can result in Supreme Court review of a case, but not in other circumstances.

The second title is "TITLE II: DNA Testing."

My bill also addresses the issue of DNA testing for prisoners who claim that such testing would exonerate them. This bill would establish the procedures for federal prisoners who seek such review. It would also mandate that states adopt similar procedures. My bill would establish federal procedures that set a middle ground between the two DNA bills that are currently pending before the Senate.

My bill requires that a person seeking DNA testing not take a position inconsistent with any affirmative defense he may have raised at trial. An affirmative defense is one such as self-defense, where a defendant is not denying that he committed one or more of the acts constituting the charged offense, but the defendant is denying criminal responsibility. One of the other pending bills does not have any similar provision, and another bill requires that the defendant's current theory of defense not be inconsistent with a prior theory of defense. However, my bill would allow a defendant who pled guilty to request DNA testing. Unfortunately, there are instances where due to inadequate representation or lack of sophistication on a defendant's part, or for a variety of other reasons, a defendant will plead guilty to a crime that he did not commit. My bill would allow such a defendant to seek DNA testing.

Another difference is that my bill has a five year limitation on its application, with one exception regarding newly discovered evidence. One of the other pending bills has no time limitation, and the other has a three year time limitation. The thrust of all the pending DNA bills is to allow a prisoner to seek potentially exculpatory DNA testing, even though such a request would otherwise be barred on procedural grounds, such as timeliness requirements.

My bill would benefit those defendants currently incarcerated who did not have access to DNA testing at the time of their trials. My bill defines lack of access rather broadly. If 1, the technology was actually not available, or 2, it was not generally known that such testing was available at the time of trial, or 3, if the technology was available and the testing was not requested and the applicant shows that the failure to have requested testing is attributable to deficient performance on his counsel's part, then the applicant is deemed not to have had access to the testing. The bill would allow a prisoner to seek testing for up to five years after the enactment of the bill, with the exceptions I noted above. Five years would give all defendants currently incarcerated enough time to bring their claims.

I do not propose that there be no time limitation, because I do not want to create an exception that could conceivably swallow the time limitations currently existing in federal law.

However, that concern may be misplaced. A track record of five years can tell us if this bill is ripe for abuse. If not, then the bill can be reenacted with no time limit. If, however, there is evidence that is being abused by prisoners, then the law would expire. Based on my experience as a prosecutor, I am concerned that the three year limitation is not long enough to develop a good track record on the use of this testing.

There would be an exception for this five year limitation. If a prisoner can show that there is newly discovered evidence in his case, and such evidence could not have been discovered through due diligence, or the failure to discover the evidence is attributable to deficient performance on his counsel's part, then he could bring a claim beyond the five year limit. This exception is consistent with the laws currently in force concerning newly discovered evidence.

Some may question the need for these DNA testing procedures in federal cases, as the level of practice and standard of representation is considered to be of the highest caliber. Even at that level there can be problems. Even though it did not involve DNA testing, we had the case of Timothy McVeigh when only days before his scheduled execution the FBI announced that it had discovered documents it had failed to provide the defense before trial. This highlights that even at the federal level mistakes can be made. This bill would provide one safeguard against such mistakes.

My bill would also mandate that states provide similar procedures to state prisoners in all cases. One of the pending bills has such a requirement, but only in capital cases. DNA evidence is such a powerful tool that can exonerate the unjustly convicted that I believe Congress has the authority pursuant to Section V of the 14th Amendment to impose post-conviction DNA testing requirements on the states.

In 1963, the United States Supreme Court decided the seminal case of "Brady v. Maryland," 373 U.S. 83, where the Court held that "suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused . . . violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or punishment . . ." The Court also noted that "[s]ociety wins not only when the guilty are convicted but when criminal trials are fair; our system of the administration of justice suffers when any accused is treated unfairly." Congress has the authority to enact legislation to enforce the protections of the "due process" clause through Section V of the 14th Amendment.

DNA evidence is the most powerful evidence that can be "favorable to an accused," because it can prove that the accused did not commit the crime. But when DNA evidence remains in the hands of the state untested, we do not know if it is favorable or unfavorable to the accused. It really is not "evidence" until it is tested, because its relevancy to guilt or innocence cannot be determined without testing. When a state does not provide a defendant with the opportunity to determine whether evidence may exculpate him, the state is, in effect, "suppressing . . . favorable evidence" by not allowing a defendant to determine whether it is favorable or not.

DNA evidence has proven to be extremely valuable to the criminal justice system. It has aided prosecutions and freed unjustly convicted persons. Since 1973, over 100 people have been freed from Death Row, at least 10 due to DNA testing. Additionally, over a total of 100 people have been freed after having been exonerated in both capital cases and non-capital cases due to DNA testing. The FBI has found that since 1989, DNA testing has cleared about 25% of sexual assault suspects whose samples are sent to the FBI for testing. Indeed, DNA evidence can be a stronger indicator of innocence than guilt. If the defendant's DNA does not match the DNA evidence, that is conclusive evidence. However, when a match results, in actuality, it is only a probability, albeit a very high probability, that the defendant was the source of the DNA.

In questioning whether the death penalty was being fairly administered in the United States, Supreme Court Justice Sandra O'Connor noted the number of Death Row inmates freed due to being exonerated, to include by DNA testing. Indeed, she commented that "[i]f statistics are any indication, the system may well be allowing some innocent defendants to be executed." This concern was made manifest when the Governor of Illinois ordered a moratorium on the death penalty after 13 Death Row inmates were exonerated. Justice O'Connor also noted that the availability of DNA testing in the various states varied widely, with some states affording this post-conviction DNA testing and others not providing any at all. Even in those states that offer such testing, there is a wide variation in procedures. My bill would require the states to adopt procedures similar to the federal standards and thereby promote consistency among the states.

Indeed, the recent groundswell of opinion questioning the death penalty has been based on doubts about its accuracy. Providing Death Row defendants with the opportunity for DNA testing would do much to allay those concerns.

But the death penalty is not the only reason for enacting this bill. Many federal and state prisoners are currently incarcerated for long sentences due to mandatory minimums and Sentencing Guidelines. Indeed, the prisoner most recently freed due to DNA testing had served 21 years of an 80 year sentence for rape. Additionally, DNA evidence is relevant in many types of cases, beyond the classic sex assault cases and violent crimes where there is blood evidence. For example, in a bank robbery case, the FBI was able to connect a suspected robber to the case by recovering some hairs from a woolen cap the robber used as a mask. Obviously, such evidence could also be used to exonerate a defendant.

However, in order for this DNA testing to be of any use, there must be evidence to test. That is why this bill requires the preservation of biological evidence for the five year period after the enactment of this bill or, if someone requests testing pursuant to this bill, while those proceedings are underway.

This bill does more than provide justice to wrongfully convicted defendants. It also protects the public. When a person is wrongfully convicted of murder or rape, that allows the real perpetrator to remain at large. And based on my experience as District Attorney, sexual predators, especially those who prey on children, have the highest levels of recidivism.

As noted above, the authority for enacting this provision is Section V of the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. When a state fails to provide DNA testing that might bear on the guilt or innocence of a defendant, then the state is depriving the defendant of his life or liberty without due process of law. The state's interest in the finality of a conviction is strong. However, when balancing that interest against a prisoner's interest in not being wrongfully executed, justice cries out for access to DNA testing.

The need for Congress to address this issue was highlighted by two recent federal court decisions that addressed giving state prisoners access to DNA testing. In the 2001 case of "Godschalk v. Montgomery County District Attorney's Office," 177 F.Supp.2d 366, Judge Charles R. Weiner of the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania ruled that a prisoner who sought DNA testing had a right to such testing pursuant to the Due Process clause of the 14th Amendment because such evidence could be exculpatory evidence as defined by "Brady v. Maryland" and its progeny. In 1987, Godschalk had been convicted of two rapes committed in 1986. At the time of trial, DNA testing was not available. At the trial, the prosecution introduced an audiotaped confession by Godschalk that contained details of the crimes not known to the public.

Godschalk's state appeals of his convictions were denied, as well as his petitions for DNA testing. Godschalk then brought an action pursuant to 42 U.S. Code Section 1983 seeking DNA testing. The evidence from only one of the rapes was still in a condition so that it could be tested, but there was no dispute that the same person committed both rapes. The court ordered the DNA testing, noting that "[w]hile [Godschalk's] detailed confessions to the rapes are powerful inculpatory evidence, so to any DNA testing that would exclude [Godschalk] as the source of the genetic material taken from the victims would be powerful exculpatory evidence. . . . Given the well-known powerful exculpatory effect of DNA testing, confidence in the jury's finding of [Godschalk's] guilt at his past trial, where such evidence was not considered, would be undermined." 177 F.Supp.2d at 370. The evidence was tested, and it did not match Godschalk's DNA, and he was subsequently freed.

The United States Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit reached a different result in the 2002 case of "Harvey v. Horan," 278 F.3d at 370. In that case, Harvey had been convicted of rape and forcible sodomy. Harvey brought a Section 1983 action to have the evidence in that case tested with a new DNA technology that had not been available at the time of his trial. The district court granted his request, but on appeal the Fourth Circuit found his request to be procedurally barred. The court found that Section 1983 was not the proper path for such a request and that Harvey's request was, in effect, a petition for habeas corpus, which was statutorily barred as a successive petition. The court specifically noted that Harvey's path of redress was either through the state courts and legislature or Congress, stating that "[f]ederal and state legislatures and state courts are free in ways that [the federal court is] not to set the ground rules by which further collateral attacks on state convictions such as Harvey's may be entertained." 278 F.3d at 380. The purpose of my bill is to establish those "ground rules."

The third title is "Title III: Counsel Standards."

Finally, my bill would establish minimal standards for defense counsel in state court cases where the defendant is facing the death penalty. In 1991, when my distinguished colleague and friend Senator BIDEN chaired the Judiciary Committee, he asked Professor James Liebman of Columbia Law School to calculate the frequency of relief in capital habeas corpus cases. This ultimately led Professor Liebman to conduct a study of the error rates in capital cases. His study found that one of the two most common errors prompting a majority of reversals at the state post-conviction stage was "egregiously incompetent defense lawyers who didn't even look for and demonstrably missed important evidence that the defendant was innocent or did not deserve to die . . .” In a more recent study released this year, Professor Liebman again cited the poor quality of defense counsel as a contributing factor to erroneous results in capital cases. And we all have heard the stories of defense counsel sleeping during the course of a capital trial.

My bill would establish minimal standards for defense counsel in capital cases who represent indigent defendants. The standards I propose are the same that are required in federal courts and establish an absolute floor for competence of counsel, both at the trial level and the appellate level. Unlike the other two pending bills, my bill would establish and mandate actual standards. If these standards are good enough for the federal courts, they should be good enough for state courts. They are specific enough to ensure that a defendant receives competent representation but also general enough so that they could be applied throughout the United States. Among other requirements, the bill would require that any counsel have several years of felony experience, and that a defendant would have a right to two defense counsel at trial.

One of the requirements is that defense counsel be “learned in the law applicable to capital cases.” Concededly, this is a rather general requirement which we can develop and explore at hearings on this bill and bring more definition to through legislative history or amending the bill. However, such generic language would allow flexibility between the different states, where the number of capital cases vary widely. For example, there may be a very experienced felony defense counsel who has never actually tried a capital case, but has attended several training sessions put on by the ABA or an equivalent organization. Why should not such a person be deemed competent to serve as defense counsel in a capital case even though he or she may have never defended such a case before? And this “generic” requirement will have a strict enforcement mechanism described below that will ensure it has “teeth.”

In the seminal 1963 case of “Gideon v. Wainwright,” 372 U.S. 335, the Supreme Court recognized that indigent defendants have a constitutional right to be represented by counsel in criminal cases. In the 1984 case of “Strickland v. Washington,” 466 U.S. 668, the Supreme Court held that a defendant has a constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel guaranteed by the 6th Amendment to the Constitution, and that this requirement applied to the states through the due process clause of the 14th Amendment. Interestingly, “Strickland” was a death penalty case.

As these rights are guaranteed by the Constitution and apply to the states through the “due process” clause of the 14th Amendment, Congress has the authority to enforce these rights through Section V of that Amendment.

There is no doubt that there is state action in these circumstances, as the state is responsible for appointing and compensating the counsel representing indigent defendants.

My bill, however, also contains an additional enforcement mechanism. “Strickland” identified a two-part analysis in determining whether there was a constitutional violation due to ineffective assistance of counsel. The first prong of that analysis is a determination whether “counsel’s performance was deficient,” that is, whether the “counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the ‘counsel’ guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment.” “Strickland,” 466 U.S. at 687. The second prong requires a determination as to whether the “counsel’s errors were so serious as to deprive the defendant of a fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable.” Id. A defendant must establish both prongs to make a successful challenge. My bill would, in effect, eliminate the first prong of the analysis in a habeas corpus proceeding. If a defendant’s counsel did not meet the standards established by my bill, then the first prong of “deficient performance” would be deemed to have been met. The defendant would then only have to satisfy the requirements of the second prong, thus allowing him to challenge the decisions his counsel made that influenced the outcome of the trial, without having to fear that the habeas court would deem such decisions to be “tactical” decisions that were within the realm of reasonable practice. However, if a state adopted the standards contained in my bill, a defendant would have to make both showings, as required by current law. A habeas court’s review as to whether these standards were met will be “de novo” and the State would have the burden of proving that the standards had been met.

This overall enforcement provision is analogous to the provision I referred to earlier in the 1996 antiterrorism act, that provided for expedited habeas review if a state adopted certain procedures for indigent defendants.

The provisions of my bill are all aimed at achieving one goal—securing for all defendants throughout the criminal justice process all the protections guaranteed by the “due process” clause and thereby ensuring that they receive fair treatment throughout the process, regardless of their income level.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill containing these three provisions be printed in the RECORD.

Additionally, in order to facilitate hearings or perhaps legislative enactment of these bills, I am introducing the three separately: a separate bill on DNA evidence; a separate bill on staying execution, where the Supreme Court has granted certiorari; and a separate bill on adequacy of counsel, so that, in total, four bills are being introduced, and I ask that these bills also be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bills were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

“CHAPTER 228A—POST-CONVICTION DNA TESTING

“Sec.

“3600. DNA testing.

“3600A. Prohibition on destruction of biological evidence.

“§ 3600. DNA testing

“(a) MOTION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual imprisoned because of a conviction of a criminal offense in a court of the United States (referred to in this section as the ‘applicant’) may make a written motion to the court that entered the judgment of conviction for the performance of forensic DNA testing on specified evidence that was secured in relation to the investigation or prosecution that resulted in the conviction.

“(2) CONTENTS.—The motion shall—

“(A) include an assertion by the applicant, under penalty of perjury, that the applicant is actually innocent of the crime for which the applicant is imprisoned or of unchanged conduct, if the exoneration of the applicant of such conduct would result in a mandatory reduction in the sentence of the applicant;

“(B) identify the specific evidence secured in relation to the investigation or prosecution that resulted in the conviction for which testing is requested;

“(C) identify a theory of defense—

“(i) the validity of which would establish the actual innocence of the applicant, and explain how the requested DNA testing would substantiate that theory; and

“(ii) that is not inconsistent with any affirmative defense issued by the applicant in the original prosecution;

“(D) make a prima facie showing that the conditions set forth in subsection (c) for issuance of a testing order are satisfied; and

“(E) certify that the applicant will provide a DNA sample from the applicant for purposes of comparison.

“(3) FILING.—A motion filed under this section is timely if—

“(A) it is filed within 60 months of the date of enactment of this section;

“(B) the applicant can show that—

“(i) the evidence identified pursuant to paragraph (2)(B) is newly discovered; and

“(ii)(I) such evidence could not have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence; or

“(II) the proximate cause for not having previously discovered such evidence was the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; or

“(C) the applicant can show that—

“(i)(I) the technology for the requested DNA testing was not available at the time of trial;

“(II) it was not generally known that such technology was available at the time of trial; or

“(III) the failure to request such testing using the technology was due to the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; and

“(ii) if any of the evidence was previously subjected to DNA testing, the testing now requested uses a newer technology for DNA testing that is reasonably certain to provide results that are substantially more accurate and probative than any previous DNA testing of the evidence.

“(b) NOTICE TO THE GOVERNMENT; PRESERVATION ORDER; APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL.—

“(1) NOTICE TO THE GOVERNMENT.—Upon receipt of a motion under subsection (a), the court shall promptly notify the government of the motion and afford the government an opportunity to respond to the motion.

“(2) PRESERVATION ORDER.—The court may direct the government to preserve any evidence to which a motion under subsection (a) relates to the extent necessary to carry out proceedings under this section.

“(3) APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL.—The court may appoint counsel for an indigent applicant under this section in accordance with section 3006A of this title.

“(c) ORDER FOR DNA TESTING.—The court shall order the DNA testing requested in a motion filed under this section if—

“(1) the motion satisfies the requirements of subsection (a);

“(2)(A) the identity of the perpetrator was at issue in the trial that resulted in the conviction of the applicant; or

“(B) in a case where the applicant pled guilty, the identity of the perpetrator would have been at issue at trial;

“(3) the evidence to be tested is in the possession of the government and has been subject to a chain of custody and retained under conditions sufficient to ensure that it has not been substituted, contaminated, tampered with, replaced, or altered in any respect material to the requested DNA testing;

“(4)(A)(i) the technology for the requested DNA testing was not available at the time of trial;

“(ii) it was not generally known that such technology was available; or

“(iii) the applicant can show that the failure to request such testing was due to the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; and

“(B) if any of the evidence was previously subjected to DNA testing, the testing now requested uses a newer DNA testing technique which is reasonably certain to provide results that are substantially more accurate and probative than any previous DNA testing of the evidence;

“(5) the proposed DNA testing uses scientifically sound methods and is consistent with accepted forensic practice;

“(6) the proposed DNA testing is reasonable in scope; and

“(7) the court determines, after review of the record of the trial of the applicant and any other relevant evidence, that there is a reasonable probability that the results of the proposed DNA testing will enable the applicant to establish that the applicant is entitled to a new trial under the standard of subsection (e)(3).

“(d) TESTING PROCEDURES; REPORTING OF TEST RESULTS.—

“(1) TESTING PROCEDURES.—The court shall direct that any DNA testing ordered under this section be carried out by—

“(A) a laboratory mutually selected by the government and the applicant; or

“(B) if the government and the applicant are unable to agree on a laboratory, a laboratory selected by the court ordering the testing.

“(2) LABORATORY APPROVAL.—With respect to DNA testing by a laboratory in accordance with this subsection, other than an FBI laboratory, the court must approve the selection of the laboratory and make all necessary orders to ensure the integrity of the evidence and the testing process and the reliability of the test results.

“(3) LABORATORY COSTS.—The applicant shall pay the cost of any testing by a laboratory in accordance with this subsection, other than an FBI laboratory, except that the court shall pay, in accordance with section 3006A of this title, the cost if the applicant would otherwise be financially incapable of securing such testing.

“(4) DISCLOSURE OF TEST RESULTS.—The results of any DNA testing ordered under this section—

“§ 3600. DNA testing

“(a) MOTION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—An individual imprisoned because of a conviction of a criminal offense in a court of the United States (referred to in this section as the ‘applicant’) may make a written motion to the court that entered the judgment of conviction for the performance of forensic DNA testing on specified evidence that was secured in relation to the investigation or prosecution that resulted in the conviction.

“(2) CONTENTS.—The motion shall—

of such conduct would result in a mandatory reduction in the sentence of the applicant;

“(B) identify the specific evidence secured in relation to the investigation or prosecution that resulted in the conviction for which testing is requested;

“(C) identify a theory of defense—

“(i) the validity of which would establish the actual innocence of the applicant, and explain how the requested DNA testing would substantiate that theory; and

“(ii) that is not inconsistent with any affirmative defense issued by the applicant in the original prosecution;

“(D) make a prima facie showing that the conditions set forth in subsection (c) for issuance of a testing order are satisfied; and

“(E) certify that the applicant will provide a DNA sample from the applicant for purposes of comparison.

“(3) FILING.—A motion filed under this section is timely if—

“(A) it is filed within 60 months of the date of enactment of this section;

“(B) the applicant can show that—

“(i) the evidence identified pursuant to paragraph (2)(B) is newly discovered; and

“(ii) (I) such evidence could not have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence; or

“(II) the proximate cause for not having previously discovered such evidence was the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; or

“(C) the applicant can show that—

“(i) (I) the technology for the requested DNA testing was not available at the time of trial;

“(II) it was not generally known that such technology was available at the time of trial; or

“(III) the failure to request such testing using the technology was due to the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; and

“(ii) if any of the evidence was previously subjected to DNA testing, the testing now requested uses a newer technology for DNA testing that is reasonably certain to provide results that are substantially more accurate and probative than any previous DNA testing of the evidence.

“(b) NOTICE TO THE GOVERNMENT; PRESERVATION ORDER; APPOINTMENT OF COUNSEL.—

“(1) NOTICE TO THE GOVERNMENT.—Upon receipt of a motion under subsection (a), the court shall promptly notify the government of the motion and afford the government an opportunity to respond to the motion.

“(4)(A)(i) the technology for the requested DNA testing was not available at the time of trial;

“(ii) it was not generally known that such technology was available; or

“(iii) the applicant can show that the failure to request such testing was due to the deficient performance of the attorney of the applicant; and

“(B) if any of the evidence was previously subjected to DNA testing, the testing now requested uses a newer DNA testing technique which is reasonably certain to provide results that are substantially more accurate and probative than any previous DNA testing of the evidence;

“(5) the proposed DNA testing uses scientifically sound methods and is consistent with accepted forensic practice;

“(6) the proposed DNA testing is reasonable in scope; and

“(7) the court determines, after review of the record of the trial of the applicant and any other relevant evidence, that there is a reasonable probability that the results of the proposed DNA testing will enable the applicant to establish that the applicant is entitled to a new trial under the standard of subsection (e)(3).

“(d) TESTING PROCEDURES; REPORTING OF TEST RESULTS.—

“(1) TESTING PROCEDURES.—The court shall direct that any DNA testing ordered under this section be carried out by—

“(B) submit the DNA testing results to the Department of Justice for inclusion in the Combined DNA Index System; and “(C) on motion of the government, proceed as provided in paragraph (5)(A).

“(5) FAILURE TO OBTAIN RELIEF.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—If the applicant fails to obtain relief under this subsection, the court, on motion by the government, shall make a determination whether the assertion of innocence by the applicant was false.

By Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself,
Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. STEVENS, Mr.
INOUE, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, and Mr. DORGAN):

S. 2448. A bill to improve nationwide access to broadband services; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Broadband Telecommunications Act of 2002. This legislation is designed to promote the deployment of broadband technology in rural and under-served areas of the market.

The Internet has unquestionably revolutionized our society, making it possible to transmit data and engage in commerce in a manner not previously experienced. However, notwithstanding its enormous benefits, the Internet is still in its building stage, with its greatest capacity yet to be reached. An important element in enhancing the Internet's capability is the technology known as “broadband.” This refers to the technologies and facilities that enhance the speed and efficiency by which voice, video, data communications are transmitted.

Many, in fact, believe that broadband is the key to securing the Internet as the central medium of interstate and global commerce. Once extensively and fully deployed and accepted by consumers and the marketplace, broadband will undoubtedly produce marvelous advantages: permitting physicians to consult with each other and share information instantaneously, thus enriching the learning process; allowing consumers to access entertainment including music and movies, as well as other products at any given time; and offering workers greater options, as it will facilitate the ability of workers to access from home, electronic files as well as communicate with coworkers by voice and video.

Before this great vision can be realized, however, several key issues will have to be addressed. These include ensuring that broadband is deployed to all Americans and promoting consumer confidence in the Internet, while simultaneously preserving competition in the telecommunications and Internet markets.

With respect to broadband deployment, telephone and cable companies have been upgrading their networks, in order to provide broadband service. As it stands today, broadband availability for residential Internet users is approximately 85 percent. However, even though this number is admirable, there are still specific areas where broadband capability has yet to take hold. This predicament mostly involves rural, as well as some inner city areas. Ensuring the availability of broadband in these markets is the public policy challenge we face today. Clearly, Congress' main responsibility is ensuring that the right policy is pursued and implemented to accomplish this goal.

Reports indicate that small telephone companies, have been diligently rolling out broadband service in rural areas. Nevertheless, to achieve the goal of broadband deployment in all rural and underserved areas, the government will need to provide some assistance. In recognition of this need, Senators ROCKEFELLER and DORGAN both members of the Commerce Committee, have sponsored bills to support such deployments with options such as low interest loans and tax credits.

The approach taken by Senators ROCKEFELLER and DORGAN represent a constructive approach to achieving greater broadband deployment. Financial assistance, through measures such as loans, grants, and tax incentives, is necessary to help defray the cost of these additional deployments. By providing loans and grants, the bill I introduce today takes a similar approach to achieving broadband deployment.

In addition to deployment of broadband facilities, there also is an issue concerning broadband speeds. Currently, the broadband facilities that are being deployed to residential consumers provide speeds of up to 1.5 megabits per second. However, groups such as TechNet, maintain that in order to realize the real potential of broadband—telemedicine, distance learning, teleworking, and entertainment over the Internet, telecommunications facilities must be able to provide speeds of 50 to 100 megabits. If this is correct, as policy makers we must, at a minimum, determine what is necessary both technologically and financially to accomplish this goal. Such findings will provide the basis to determine the policies Congress will be compelled to pursue if a determination is made that speeds of 50 to 100 megabits per second are necessary.

Even as we discuss broadband speeds of 50–100 megabits, we must acknowledge that consumers do not seem seduced by the available broadband speeds of 1.5 megabits. In fact, reports show, that about 10 percent actually subscribe to broadband, leading many to believe that low demand is the problem, not slow deployment. If achieving a broadband environment is a priority, in addition to spurring deployment, we must eliminate the impediments that block consumers from obtaining the content, services, and applications necessary to make broadband service a useful and productive tool.

Another essential issue concerning the promotion of broadband involves the issue of privacy. Consumers use of the Internet is a fundamental first step to promoting interest in broadband. This will not be possible, however, unless consumers are confident that their privacy and personal information are protected and secured. To accomplish this goal, sufficient precautions will have to be taken to ensure that highly sensitive personal data—including financial, medical, social security numbers—cannot be stolen or misused. The Commerce Committee has established a substantial record on the issue of Internet privacy. That record demonstrates that consumers will use the Internet for more personal purposes only when they are confident that their information is secure. I have introduced separate legislation on this matter.

The broadband bill entitled the Broadband Telecommunications Act of 2002, that I introduce today represents a step towards fostering the deployment and adoption of broadband services. It uses monies from the telephone excise tax to fund a number of loan and grant programs. It stimulates broadband deployment in rural and underserved areas by providing low interest loans to upgrade facilities including remote terminals and fiber between a remote terminal and central office. It authorizes NIST to study how we can facilitate broadband deployment in rural and under-served areas. It promotes competition by establishing pilot projects for wireless and other non-wireline broadband technologies in rural and underserved areas. The bill begins to help us understand what is necessary to accomplish broadband with speeds of 50 to 100 megabits per second by providing grants to NTIA's Lab, NIST Labs, National Science Board and to universities for research. In order to address the demand issue, we provide grants to digitize library and museum collections as well as grants to Universities to conduct technical research to develop Internet applications useful to consumers. The bill also provides grants to connect under-represented colleges and communities to the Internet.

Ultimately, if we decide as a nation that a broadband world must be achieved, we must move beyond the rhetoric of parity and regulation versus deregulation. We must move forward and begin to deal with the real issues that impact broadband deployment and use. These include stimulating deployment in unserved and under-served areas, promoting competition to existing monopolies, ensuring the availability of content and other Internet applications, preserving the privacy of consumers as they use the Internet, safeguarding cyber security, in addition to advancing policies such as e-government, teleworking, telemedicine, and distance learning. I ask my colleagues to join me in an open and forthright debate on these issues.

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself,
Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. TORRICELLI, and Mr. CORZINE):

S. 2449. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to allow Federal payments to be made to States under the medicaid program for providing pregnancy-related services or services for the testing or treatment for communicable diseases to aliens who are not lawfully admitted for permanent residence or otherwise permanently residing in the United States under color of law, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, the legislation I am introducing today with Senators MCCAIN, TORRICELLI, and CORZINE entitled the "Federal Responsibility for Immigrant Health Act of 2002" is designed to address the hardship caused by Federal limitations on Medicaid reimbursement to health care providers and states for health services provided to immigrants. Despite the fact that immigration is a Federal responsibility, medical providers, who have a legal and ethical responsibility to save lives regardless of immigration status, and State and local governments bear most of the costs for services provided to immigrants.

The bill expressly allows States and health care providers to receive Medicaid reimbursement for dialysis and chemotherapy services, prenatal care, and the testing and treatment of communicable diseases provided to immigrants; reauthorizes funding, which was provided between fiscal years 1998 and 2001 but expired this year, in the increased amount of $50 million annually for fiscal years 2003 to 2007 for unreimbursed emergency health services provided to immigrants; and clarifies that the federal government should not limit the ability of state or local governments to use their own funding to address the health care needs of immigrants within their communities.

The Constitution of the United States establishes sole authority in the Federal Government to control immigration to this country. Despite that fact, the Federal Government often fails to take financial responsibility for the costs of immigration. Numerous studies also indicate that immigrants pay more to the Federal Government in the form of taxes than they receive in services, but State government and local communities and providers bear most of the costs of services provided to them.

In Luna County, NM, for example, the Columbus Volunteer Fire Department and Ambulance Service has a contract with the county to provide emergency medical services to the people in Luna County. Luna County is one of the poorest counties in the Nation with almost one-third of its citizens below poverty and with a per capita income at just 49 percent of the national average. Luna County has an extremely difficult time addressing the needs of its own citizens due to a high level of need and limited resources.

And yet, with respect to emergency medical services, Luna County, the Columbus Volunteer Fire Department and Ambulance Service, and Mimbres Memorial Hospital must also respond to the numerous calls from federal officials at the port-of-entry near Columbus, NM, to treat or transport an injured or ill immigrants. The Columbus Volunteer Fire Department and Ambulance Service is located just three miles from the Columbus port-of-entry and is 32 miles from Mimbres Memorial Hospital in Deming, NM.

Moreover, the ambulance service is also called in when individuals are apprehended after crossing illegally if injury or illness results, often while in the custody of the Federal Immigration and Naturalization Service, INS. Once treated, the Luna County Sheriff's Office is called to take them back from Deming to the Columbus port-of-entry where they are returned across the border to their homes in Mexico.

According to data collected by the United States/Mexico Border Counties Coalition through a grant from the Department of Justice, in 1999, the Columbus Volunteer Fire Department and Ambulance Service responded to 264 calls, of which 56 percent were at the port-of-entry and 52 percent were for patients residing outside of the United States. Of services billed, 59 percent were for treatment of non-U.S. resident patients and the vast majority of those bills went unpaid. In fact, for both the EMS system and the hospital, a large majority of billings sent to patients residing outside of the United States are returned as either unclaimed or undeliverable much less paid.

To help the County and ambulance service, I secured $200,000 last year through the Labor-HHS Appropriations bill for the costs of emergency medical services delivered to immigrants in this fiscal year. The funding, however, is just a temporary band-aid to a system that is poorly funded and cannot survive without the federal government living up to its responsibility to help pay the costs of health services delivered to immigrants. This bill helps address that responsibility.

As Ronald Reagan, then Governor of the State of California, testified before the Senate Finance Committee in 1972, "the support of citizens of other countries shall be a fiscal obligation of the federal government." He added, "States should not be required to support citizens of another country, when the state and county governments have no effective voice in determining admission standards."

In response to such concerns, the Federal Government has taken two important steps over the years, providing for federal reimbursement for emergency care to low-income immigrants in 1986 and providing additional funding to states for unreimbursed costs delivered to immigrants in emergency situations in 1997. The first needs a technical change and the second, unfortunately, expired in 2001 and needs to be reauthorized.

The first step that was taken occurred through the leadership of Senator Lloyd Bentsen and Representative HENRY WAXMAN in 1986 and was signed into law by President Reagan. It provides for federal reimbursement through the Medicaid program to health providers for emergency care services provided to low-income immigrants. Services delivered to immigrants who are residents in the country may have the cost of their emergency care reimbursed through Medicaid—a joint federal and state program serving low-income and disabled people. However, in the case of Luna County, the majority of its cases are to immigrants who reside outside of the country, and therefore, do not qualify. This legislation clarifies that States may waive the residency requirement for an immigrant who either comes across the border under a temporary visa or is paroled into the country by INS.

The bill also clarifies that, since dialysis and chemotherapy are life-threatening conditions, these services qualify as emergency care and are eligible for reimbursement by Medicaid. Unfortunately, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, CMS, recently denied payment to the State of Arizona for such services and have forced the State to pay for such treatment with 100 percent state funding. This is, once again, a case of the federal government not fulfilling its responsibility and our bill corrects this problem.

The "Federal Responsibility for Immigrant Health Act of 2002" would also provide states the option to reimburse providers for the costs of prenatal care and the testing and treatment of communicable diseases to low-income immigrants. A January 2000 study in the American Journal of Obstetrics and Gynecology found that undocumented women with no prenatal care were four times more likely to deliver low birth-weight American citizen infants and seven times more likely to deliver premature infants than undocumented women with prenatal care. Moreover, a child born in the United States of undocumented parents is a United States citizen.

Simply stated, if a pregnant woman is denied access to prenatal care due to immigration status, it is her child who is denied the opportunity to be "well-born" and the financial costs associated with poor outcomes are high.

In addition, States and local governments often seek to ensure that all of their residents, including immigrants, are tested and treated for certain communicable diseases. It is in the interest of all citizens to ensure that everybody residing in this country is treated for communicable diseases. As Dr. Richard Brown, Director of UCLA's Center for Health Policy Research says, "Tuberculosis and other communicable diseases do not respect distinctions between citizens and non-citizens . . . The key to controlling an outbreak of tuberculosis, hepatitis, sexually transmitted diseases, or other communicable diseases is early identification of the source of infection and immediate intervention to treat all infected persons." Again, to address these problems, the bill would allow states to reimburse providers for the costs of prenatal care and the testing and treatment of communicable diseases to low-income immigrants through the Medicaid program.

Another area where the Federal Government did take an important step to assume its responsibility for the costs of emergency health services delivered to immigrants was through $25 million in payments to States between fiscal year 1998 through 2001. The following 12 States were eligible for this additional funding over the four-year period, which expired at the end of last year:

California, $11.3 million, Texas, $4.0 million, New York, $3.1 million, Florida, $2.0 million, Illinois, $1.6 million, New Jersey, $765,000, Arizona, $652,000, Massachusetts, $482,000, Virginia, $312,000, Washington, $295,000, Colorado, $255,000, and Maryland, $249,000. Unfortunately, that provision in law expired in 2001 and needs to be reauthorized.

The "Federal Responsibility for Immigrant Health Act of 2002" reauthorizes the program at $50 million between fiscal years 2003 and 2007, extends the number of qualifying States to 15, and requires that States pass those payments on to health care providers who are providing this care. This helps cover the costs associated with care to immigrants needing emergency care that do not qualify for Medicaid, such as men who do not meet the categorical requirements for Medicaid coverage. In addition, the bill clarifies that the 15 qualifying States are those that have the highest percentage of immigrants rather than the highest numbers, which assures States such as New Mexico are not inappropriately left out of the funding in the future.

And finally, the bill clarifies that the Federal Government should not limit State or local governments from using their own funding to provide health services to immigrants in their communities. The 10th Amendment prevents the Federal Government from interfering in the authority by State and local governments to spend their own revenue as they see fit.

Unfortunately, a provision in the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act, PRWORA, in 1996 has been interpreted by Texas Attorney General John Cornyn and some in the State of New Mexico, including the University of New Mexico Hospital, to preclude state and local governments from providing non-emergency care services, with the exceptions of immunizations and the testing and treatment of communicable diseases, unless the State decides to override the law by passing its own legislation specifically authorizing such services.

Others have disagreed. El Paso County Attorney Jose Rodriguez disagreed with the opinion of the Texas Attorney General in a August 14, 2001, letter by saying, "There is nothing in the PRWORA that expressly prohibits providing health care to undocumented aliens . . . There are no enforcement mechanisms in the PRWORA, and there are no penalties directed at state or local governments." As a result, the public hospitals in El Paso, TX, and elsewhere in Texas have largely ignored the Texas Attorney General's opinion.

However, in New Mexico, the University of New Mexico Hospital has chosen to tighten eligibility requirements for its health care services. They argue they are complying with the ambiguous law.

An article that appears in an Internet-based publication entitled Border- lines entitled "Debate Over Immigrant Health Care Heats Up in New Mexico" in November 2001 notes, "Critics say the move to deny health care to some U.S. residents, regardless of the reasons, is dangerous, impractical, and inhumane. It is dangerous, they argue, because anyone with a communicable disease, illegal immigrant or not, can spread that disease if not treated. The policy is impractical, they add, because an untreated health problem will likely worsen and require more expensive treatments later, often in emergency rooms. And denying non-emergency health care to people with serious, chronic diseases like diabetes, asthma, or cancer means they must endure more pain and suffering, often as their conditions deteriorate."

As Dr. Catherine Torres of First Step Women's Health Center in Las Cruces, NM, and a member of the U.S.-Mexico Border Health Commission notes, "When do you treat a child with asthma? When [the child] can't breathe?"

This provision has also led to the unfortunate situation of imposing additional liability or malpractice exposure on health providers that work for state or local governmental health programs for denying needed health services to an individual. Health providers should not have to violate medical ethics of purposely denying needed health services to anyone and nor should they be exposed to additional liability because of a convoluted provision in federal law.

As Dan Reyna, director of New Mexico's Border Health Office in Las Cruces, NM, adds, "First, we're near an international border, we're not going to change that. Second, health care providers, both public and private, are not immigration officers for the Federal Government. And third, it's to the benefit of every state to protect community health and the quality of life of every resident. If you accept these primary premises, you have to provide preventative care services to everyone who needs it."

I urge the passage of this legislation. Although it may not be popular, the federal government should help assume its responsibility for immigration and the costs associated with health services. We talk a great deal about personal responsibility when talking about welfare reform. It is time for the federal government to take on its responsibility as well. State and local governments and health providers, already stressed by the fact that our country has around 40 million uninsured residents, cannot take on these additional costs.

I would like to thank Senators MCCAIN, TORRICELLI, and CORZINE for their support and help on this legislation. I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

By Mr. LIEBERMAN (for himself, Mr. SPECTER, and Mr. GRAHAM):

S. 2452. A bill to establish the Department of National Homeland Security and the National Office for Combating Terrorism; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce, with Senators SPECTER and GRAHAM, the National Homeland Security and Combating Terrorism Act of 2002. This legislation seeks to strengthen the Federal Government's ability to confront terrorism and other threats to our homeland security.

Specifically, this legislation would create a new Department of National Homeland Security to focus an array of agencies and programs that are vital to securing our borders and critical infrastructure, and to preparing for and responding to homeland threats. It also would create a White House terrorism director to forge an effective strategy to combat terrorism across the entire Federal Government. In addition to the bill we introduce here, I am pleased to note that companion legislation is being introduced today by Representatives THORNBERRY, HARMAN, TAUSCHER and GIBBONS.

The events of September 11 brought home to us the very real threat of terrorism not only on foreign shores, but also here at home. Though the pain of that day will stay in our hearts and minds forever, we now have an opportunity to step back from that single most horrid event in our modern history and take action to prevent something like it from ever happening again.

It seems that nearly every day, the media or government investigators expose a new crack in America's homeland defense foundation, at our borders, our ports, or within our cyberspace. The fact is, without a government that is permanently reoriented to meet unexpected challenges here at home, new vulnerabilities will emerge. That's why we must mobilize government so that it can quickly and effectively prevent terrorist threats here at home and respond should the worst occur.

Our approach, combining a homeland security department with a White House office for combating terrorism, addresses the need to permanently restructure critical homeland security functions under a cabinet-level secretary with real operational authority and the ability to personally direct a homeland security plan. At the same time, we would allow for the highest level of coordination with other Federal agencies—Health and Human Services, the Defense Department, the Energy Department, for example, and real budget certification authority.

Our proposal stems from a series of hearings I convened last fall as chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee. We held about a dozen different sessions looking into various aspects of homeland security, ranging from protection of our critical infrastructure to the state and local role in protecting Americans at home. Those hearings confirmed what experts and commissions had already warned us: that our government is poorly prepared to deal with the threat of terrorism. Although the government has an array of programs related to terrorism and other homeland threats, these efforts are poorly coordinated and lack overall strategic leadership. We need focused, accountable leadership to forge these efforts into a cohesive homeland security program.

Among the witnesses we heard from were former Senators Warren Rudman and Gary Hart, who co-chaired the so-called Hart-Rudman Commission on National Security/21st Century. Guided by recommendations of that Commission, Senator SPECTER and I introduced legislation to create a Homeland Security Department. After negotiations through the winter with Senator GRAHAM, we combined our proposal with his idea of conferring statutory authority on a White House terrorism office.

As our bill is written, the department will be led by a Cabinet official with real line and budget authority over critical homeland security programs. The new department will bring together under one roof our key border security agencies, Coast Guard, Customs, INS law enforcement, as well as the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which is the cornerstone of our emergency preparation and response efforts. The department will also include programs to protect our critical infrastructure, and an office to promote research and development of technologies vital to our homeland security. The new department will provide state and local authorities with a clear resource and point of contact to forge a truly national response to this problem.

Yet we recognize that, no matter how robust a department we create, it can not include every agency that plays a role in homeland security, which is why our legislation incorporates Senator GRAHAM's proposal to confer statutory authority on a White House office. That office—the National Office for Combating Terrorism—would coordinate a national anti-terrorism strategy. The office would be led by a presidentially-appointed, Senate-confirmed director charged with coordinating a comprehensive assessment of terrorist threats and, along with the department secretary, developing a strategy and a budget to fight terrorism here at home. The director would coordinate execution of the strategy by relevant federal agencies—particularly those concerned with intelligence and law enforcement.

Naturally, our new formation would require a major restructuring of the Federal Government's public safety-related responsibilities. I know this will not be easy. Machiavelli trenchantly observed "there is nothing more difficult to plan, more doubtful of success nor more dangerous to manage than the creation of a new system." Within the agencies, and within Congress as well, as Governor Ridge has already discovered, there are powerful reflexes to protect administrative turf. Bureaucracies are slow to change. Change is disruptive. It creates uncertainty and it distorts existing balances of power.

But we must look at September 11 as an urgent reason to create something better. A restructuring of the kind we envision is not unprecedented. We have undertaken bold organizational change in periods of crisis before. Consider General Marshall's transformation of the army which helped win World War II or the National Security Act of 1947 that created the CIA and Department of Defense in the midst of the Cold War. More recently, the Goldwater-Nichols Act of 1986, in streamlining the military command, helped us to prosecute the Persian Gulf War.

The bottom line is if statutory and budget authority are not conferred upon the director of homeland security, the homeland defense of this nation will be less than what it should be. In the one area where compromise can be catastrophic, this is an unacceptable compromise.

Let's be motivated by the words of Winston Churchill, who in 1941 said to the Axis powers, "You do your worst and we will do our best." We can tinker around the edges of change. Or, we can understand that September 11 confirmed our worst fears: warfare has changed and we are no longer safe at home. We are in a terrible, new era and we urgently need a government that is invigorated and effectively organized to meet the challenge.

I thank my colleagues and ask unanimous consent that the text of our legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TITLE IV—EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 401. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act shall take effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. THURMOND (for himself and Mr. ALLARD):

S. 2453. A bill to provide for the disposition of weapons-usable plutonium at the Savannah River Site South Carolina; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation that will provide for the disposition of weapons usable plutonium at the Savannah River Site, South Carolina. This bill will ensure the State of South Carolina will have an enforceable agreement on the construction and operation of a mixed-oxide, MOX, fuel fabrication facility at the Savannah River Site. The bill also provides for clear pathway to remove any weapons-usable plutonium from our State if the MOX facility is delayed or fails to operate as planned.

The Plutonium Disposition program is an important element of our National Security. Under agreements made by the United States and the Russian Federation, each Nation agreed to dispose of designated amounts of weapons-grade plutonium. This agreement is a significant step toward safeguarding nuclear materials and preventing their diversion to rogue states. In addition, it has been widely acknowledged that Russian criminal groups are attempting to steal weapons-usable plutonium from poorly secured sites for known terrorist organizations, and therefore most certainly this is a matter of extreme National Security.

The MOX facility will be an important economic factor in my State. As a result of this bill, Department of Energy officials will also know that SRS, the largest industrial employer in my State, will be ready and eager to accept new missions and create jobs. Helping the Savannah River Site SRS, grow and remain the "Crown Jewel" among Department of Energy facilities has been one of my proudest achievements of public service as a Senator and Governor of my State. South Carolina and the Department of Energy have had an outstanding working relationship to bring jobs to SRS while helping to defend our National Security.

I deeply regretted the recent dispute over the mixed oxide (MOX) fuel fabrication facility and the Federal lawsuit that was recently filed. I have called for reasoned and mature thinking to prevail in this matter. This legislation is intended to provide the assurances to both parties and restore the elements of trust and cooperation, while protecting the interests of the State and the health, safety and economy of its citizens. Interested parties must not fail to view this matter without taking all the factors into consideration. The health and security of South Carolinians must always be protected. current and future jobs in South Carolina must be protected. The National Security of the United States must be protected. The legislation I am introducing today will accomplish all of these objectives.

This initiative is good government and I encourage its support by my colleagues. I yield the floor.

STATEMENTS ON SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 260—DESIGNATING MAY 1, 2002, AS "NATIONAL CHILD CARE WORTHY WAGE DAY"

Mr. CORZINE (for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. DODD, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mrs. CARNAHAN, and Mrs. MURRAY) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. RES. 260

Whereas approximately 14,000,000 children are in out-of-home care during part or all of the day so that their parents may work;

Whereas the average salary of early childhood educators is $16,000 per year, and only 1/3 have health insurance and even fewer have a pension plan;

Whereas the quality of child care and other early childhood education programs is directly linked to the quality of early childhood educators, and low wages make it difficult to attract qualified individuals to the profession;

Whereas the turnover rate of early childhood educators is approximately 30 percent per year because of low wages and lack of benefits, making it difficult to retain high quality educators, and research has demonstrated that young children require caring relationships to have a consistent presence in their lives for their positive development;

Whereas the compensation of early childhood educators must be commensurate with the importance of the job of helping the young children of the United States develop their social, emotional, physical, and intellectual skills to be ready for school;

Whereas the cost of adequate compensation cannot be funded by further burdening parents with higher child care fees but requires public as well as private resources so that quality care and education is accessible for all families; and

Whereas the Center for the Child Care Workforce and other early childhood education organizations recognize May 1st as National Child Care Worthy Wage Day: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates May 1, 2002, as "National Child Care Worthy Wage Day"; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe "National Child Care Worthy Wage Day" by—

(A) honoring early childhood educators and programs in their communities; and

(B) working together to resolve the early childhood educator compensation crisis.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I rise today to submit a resolution designating May 1, 2002 as National Child Care Worthy Wage Day. On May 1 each year, child care providers and other early childhood professionals nationwide conduct public awareness and education efforts highlighting the importance of early childhood education. I hope these efforts will bring attention to early childhood education and the importance of attracting and retaining qualified child care workers.

Every day, approximately 14 million children are cared for outside the home so that their parents can work. This figure includes six million of our Nation's infants and toddlers. Children begin to learn at birth, and the quality of care they receive will affect them for the rest of their lives. Early child care affects language development, math skills, social behavior, and general readiness for school. Experienced child care workers can identify children who have development or emotional problems and provide the care they need to take on life's challenges. Through the creative use of play, structured activities and individual attention, child care workers help their charges learn about the world around them and how to interact with others.

The dedicated individuals who nurture and teach our Nation's young children are undervalued despite the importance of their work. The average salary of a child care worker is approximately $16,000 annually. According to the Department of Labor, in 1998, the middle 50 percent of child care workers and pre-school teachers earned between $5.82 and $8.13 an hour. The lowest 10 percent of child care workers were paid an hourly wage of $5.49 or less. Only one third of our Nation's child care workers have health insurance and even fewer have pension plans. This grossly inadequate level of wages and benefits for child care staff has led to difficulties in attracting and retaining high quality caretakers and educators. As a result, the turnover rate for child care providers is 30 percent a year. This high turnover rate interrupts consistent and stable relationships that children need to have with their caregivers.

To address this issue, Senator DODD and I have introduced the "Focus On Committed and Underpaid Staff for Children's Sake Act," a bill that would establish a grant and scholarship program for child care providers.

I encourage my colleagues to join me in recognizing the importance of the service that child care workers provide and the need to increase their compensation accordingly. The Nation's child care workforce, the families who depend on them, and the next generation of children that they care for deserve our support.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 104—RECOGNIZING THE AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CIVIL ENGINEERS ON THE OCCASION OF THE 150TH ANNIVERSARY OF ITS FOUNDING AND FOR THE MANY VITAL CONTRIBUTIONS OF CIVIL ENGINEERS TO THE QUALITY OF LIFE OF THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES, INCLUDING THE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROJECTS THAT HAVE LED TO THE PHYSICAL INFRASTRUCTURE OF MODERN AMERICA

Mr. JEFFORDS (for himself and Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 104

Whereas, founded in 1852, the American Society of Civil Engineers is the oldest national engineering society in the United States;

Whereas civil engineers work to constantly improve buildings, water systems, and other civil engineering works through research, demonstration projects, and the technical codes and standards developed by the American Society of Civil Engineers;

Whereas the American Society of Civil Engineers incorporates educational, scientific, and charitable efforts to advance the science of engineering, improve engineering education, maintain the highest standards of excellence in the practice of civil engineering, and protect the public health, safety, and welfare;
