Each help to develop and prepare enlisted members for positions of increased responsibility. To aid our organizational modernization, we must adopt a comprehensive approach to developing leaders that fully acknowledge the significance of effective leadership in attaining mission success.

- b. First Class Petty Officers have been identified by the LAC and others as the leaders who most often have direct responsibility for the services or the jobs accomplished by workers. They need appropriate leadership training to support their performance in the role of first-line supervisor and mentor contributing to the professional growth of personnel in their charge. LAMS, combined with other leadership resources such as the Unit Leadership Development Program (ULDP) is an essential prerequisite to effectively improve the workforce climate at the unit level and Coast Guard-wide.

Non-resident (exportable) LAMS convening dates are advertised on the Training Quota Management Center (TQC) web-site: www.uscg.mil/hq/tqc.
