Station Ludington, Michigan

USLSS Station #7, Eleventh District
Coast Guard Station #266

Location:	North side entrance of Ludington Harbor, Mich., 1/2 mile east of North Breakwater Front Light;
Date of Conveyance:	1878
Station Built:	1879
Fate:	Still in operation

Remarks:

In 1878 lifeboat stations were authorized for the communities of Manistee and Ludington, followed by Frankfort in 1882; the Coast Guard has been standing watch for mariners in distress throughout the region ever since. Station Ludington has changed over the years and was upgraded this year from a small, seasonal detachment to a full time, year-round station. In addition to our primary area of responsibility from Big Sable Point to Stoney Lake, Station Ludington provides rescue for an overall operational area of approximately 35 nautical miles of coastline encompassing 1,050 square miles, and spanning two counties.

A new station building was built and commissioned in April 2004; the 4,200 square foot facility greatly enhanced the efficiency and operational capabilities of the unit, as well as improve habitability for the crew. With a crew complement of sixteen active duty, four reservists, and more than twenty Auxiliary members (Auxiliary Flotilla 20-06), the station handles approximately 100 Search and Rescue cases per year and over 150 boardings.

Station Ludington is located at the center of the eastern shoreline of Lake Michigan
