iFORCECOM: Your Window To The FORCECOM World

iFORCECOM is the website of the United States Coast Guard Force Readiness Command, which is part of the Modernization Effort.

The Force Readiness Command (FORCECOM) is the Coast Guard's first command solely responsible for preparing forces to perform missions and execute them properly.

FORCECOM is charged with the current and future readiness of the Coast Guard's workforce -- Active Duty, Reserve, Auxiliary, Civilian and Contractor -- to ensure they will be ready when called to execute their missions.

WHEC Readiness Status Streaming to FORCECOM iFORCECOM received this post from LT Chris Brunclik of the Coast Guard's Performance Technology Center.

The Pacific Area Response division (PAC-353) in collaboration with the Coast Guard Performance Technology Center (PTC), and Coast Guard Research & Development (R&D) Center released an updated WHEC Status of Resources and Training System (SORTS) Decision Aid.

Leveraging the original Excel spreadsheets developed in 2001, the PTC completed updates to the personnel and equipment resources, made improvements to the user interface and increased the Aid's functionality. As before, the decision tool populates predetermined cells on adjoining spreadsheets enabling the SORTS Officer to enter the right information in the Navy Training and Readiness Management System (TRMS) software creating a SORTS message. Additionally, the updated matrix includes a new data gathering element created by the R&D Center.

The new element gathers all the information from the Aid and transmits the necessary data to Coast Guard Business Intelligence (CGBI) where it is portrayed in the familiar GAR Model structure for FORCECOM decision makers.

PAC-353, the PTC, and the R&D Center are continuing their partnership by finalizing and evaluating Aids for the WMEC 210', WMEC 270', and the WMSL.
